

Residential tutors to suit your lifestyle

Tutors International, a world leader in custom-designed private education, specialises in full-time residential private tuition for a clientele of elite, high net-worth families

So what distinguishes Tutors International from other tutor placement companies? Adam Caller, CEO and founder of the company, explains: "We're not merely a placement agency. We offer guidance and support in the achievement of academic goals, working with both clients and their tutors to ensure a world-class private education of the highest professional and academic standards."

Unlike other tutoring companies, Tutors International doesn't source tutors from a stock pool or database; a customised global search is conducted for each and every client enquiry, as per their specifications. Whether clients want a residential tutor, a full-time educator to work alongside mainstream education, or a homeschool tutor able to incorporate extra-curricular expertise, Tutors International's rigorous recruitment process aims to find the perfect fit for the student and his or her family.

To that end, Tutors International will meet with the client's family to gain a thorough understanding of their children's needs, noting the kinds of attitudes, values and ideas that the family wish to instil in their children, considering this just as important as any curricular requirements. Then, a detailed job specification is written before the job is posted. Each job will receive hundreds of applicants, however, only those candidates who meet every requirement will get shortlisted. At this point, the client will make the final decision.

Crucially, Tutors International is the only private tutoring company in the world offering an aftercare service, where an account manager is on hand to support clients and tutors for the duration of the contract period. Once the tutor who best suits the children's educational requirements is found, it will continue to work closely with the family. This level of personalised service ensures that the ideal tutor is working in each placement and that the children will receive high-end home schooling that suits the family's lifestyle.

Tutors International doesn't source tutors from a stock database; a customised global search is conducted for each and every client enquiry

Tutors International receives many enquiries from parents of gifted and able children who are struggling within their educational setting. Many are looking for a strengths-based education for their child where learning goes above and beyond working towards passing an exam and is instead driven by their child's curiosity and personal interests. A former student from Italy recalls: "I was 15 years old, pursuing my dream of becoming a professional tennis player, and I needed someone to help me get through my GCSEs. My tutor's objective was to get me two As, in maths and the sciences. The outcome — two As, in maths and the sciences. Sheer brilliance on his part, overcoming my fear of maths, leading me to appreciate how a teacher can change a child's life."

Tutors sign confidentiality and non-disclosure agreements and are subject to professional background screening by Kroll FPR

Tutors International has extensive experience working with ultra-high net-worth clients and understands the need for discretion and confidentiality. Tutors sign confidentiality and non-disclosure agreements and are subject to professional background screening by Kroll FPR. However, the high standards that Tutors International and its clientele require from a tutor can't be found overnight. Parents are advised to make contact now, so there's ample time to design the very best personalised learning programme for their child.

Tutors International,
Clarendon House, 52 Cornmarket
Street, Oxford OX1 3HJ
T: 01865 435 135 (UK office hours)
tutors-international.com

